

Speech Marks “ ”

Speech marks or quotation marks are used to show direct speech (what someone is saying).

Direct speech can go at the beginning of the sentence:

“Pizza is nice but burgers are the best,” said Max.

Direct speech can go at the end of the sentence:

Max said, “Pizza is nice but burgers are the best.”

Direct speech can go in the middle of the sentence:

“Pizza is nice,” Max said, “but burgers are the best.”

Rewrite each sentence, adding speech marks in the correct places.
Add in capital letters and commas where they are needed.

1. Come and sit over here Mr Shine directed.

2. Ouch! Jim shouted at the top of his lungs.

3. If you haven't finished, the teacher said, come and see me.

4. Michael exclaimed the new video game is coming out tomorrow!

5. Superman shouted watch out for the car!

6. Run two laps around the oval, Ms Lin said, and then get a drink.

7. Nick looked at his dog and asked are you hungry, boy?

8. Don't worry if you make a mistake, the coach said, because that's how you learn.

Speech Marks “ ”

Speech marks or quotation marks are used to show direct speech (what someone is saying).

Direct speech can go at the beginning of the sentence:

“Pizza is nice but burgers are the best,” said Max.

Direct speech can go at the end of the sentence:

Max said, “Pizza is nice but burgers are the best.”

Direct speech can go in the middle of the sentence:

“Pizza is nice,” Max said, “but burgers are the best.”

Rewrite each sentence, adding speech marks in the correct places.

Use the guide above to help you add in capital letters and commas where they are needed.

1. “ Come and sit over here, ” Mr Shine directed.
2. “ Ouch! ” Jim shouted at the top of his lungs.
3. “ If you haven’t finished, ” the teacher said, “ come and see me. ”
4. Michael exclaimed, “ The new video game is coming out tomorrow! ”
5. Superman shouted, “ Watch out for the car! ”
6. “ Run two laps around the oval, ” Ms Lin said, “ and then get a drink. ”
7. Nick looked at his dog and asked “ Are you hungry, boy? ”
8. “ Don’t worry if you make a mistake, ” the coach said, “ because that’s how you learn. ”