

Evaluative Language

Persuasive Language Device

Evaluative language is language that judges. It can express a positive judgment or a negative judgement.

Evaluative language can help make people feel a certain way.

For example:

The children have a terrific idea to help the poor turtles.

Add evaluative language to each sentence. What effect does your change have on the reader?

A crocodile was caught by local authorities last week.

Protesters blocked the road of motorists.

A local shop will be knocked down to make way for a skatepark.

A group of teenagers were spoken to by the manager.

We need to find homes for the puppies.
